Steven Baker Joins Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority as Vice President of Business Administration

Steven Baker has recently assumed the position of Vice President of Business Administration. That position was previously held by Margaret McKeough, who now serves as Executive Vice President of the Airports Authority.

“Steve has demonstrated his value in key positions at critical times in the growth of major airports,” said James E. Bennett, President/CEO of the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority. “I believe his background and experience will prove valuable to our airports as they expand to meet the needs of our passengers.”

Mr. Baker is a seasoned professional with extensive aviation experience in both the private and public sector of the industry. He has served as the Deputy General Manager at Hartsfield-Jackson International Airport in Atlanta and as the Deputy Aviation Director at Miami International Airport. Prior to that, Mr. Baker worked for American Airlines as Counsel for the Central and International Divisions and as a Regional Administrator for United Airlines.

Among his responsibilities at two of the major airports in the country, Mr. Baker oversaw capital improvement programs, concession development, and airline relations.

In his position with the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority, Mr. Baker will plan, develop, and manage Airports Authority business programs. These programs include airline relations, commercial leasing, airport concessions, contracting and procurement, risk management, business continuity, and equal opportunity programs at Ronald Reagan Washington National and Washington Dulles International Airports.

Mr. Baker is a graduate of Cornell University with a B.A. in economics. He earned a Masters degree from the Wharton School in Business Administration and a Juris Doctorate from The University of Pennsylvania.
