DULLES AIRPORT UPGRADES FOOD SERVICE

Variety of New Restaurants Open in All Concourses; Sit-Down Dining Returns to Main Terminal

Craving a cup of coffee? Starving for a sandwich? Or maybe you're in the mood for a chilled wine-poached chicken breast on mixed greens topped with house-made arugula pesto and a glass of chardonnay?

It's a whole new world for airport cuisine.

Whatever your appetite, timeframe or budget, Washington Dulles International Airport has a new dining option for you. Most of the food and beverage facilities at Dulles have been completely renovated over the past year with new eateries in all of the concourses. And now there's a new restaurant in the Main Terminal. Harry's Tap Room—the only sit-down restaurant located pre-security—will benefit both passengers and airport visitors.

"We're pleased to offer our passengers new and varied dining options," said James E. Bennett, President and CEO of the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority. "We continue to enhance our food concessions offerings at Dulles Airport, adding fresher, more made-to-order options, and more restaurants where passengers can sit down and enjoy a full meal before their flights. We welcome Harry's Tap Room to the Main Terminal where passengers and friends and families are now able to dine outside of security."

Dulles Airport has opened 24 new restaurants and eateries. Eighteen additional locations are scheduled within the next year. The new establishments are listed below:
